"BETWEEN OURSELVES"

The following is the first in a series of editorials spotlighting some of your Rabbi's thinking as to his underlying philosophy and prerequisite techniques for making our new Synagogue a maximum religious — educational instrument as well as an inspiring and dignified House of Worship.

My Philosophical Frame of Reference

Basic to my anschaung of Judaism is the guiding principle of "Torah im derech erez", that the Torah heritage must be synthesized with the best of secular and cultural knowledge. "Yefayfeyoso shel yefes b'eholahai shem" — "the beauty of Yeffeth in the tents of Shem." It implies that the Torah Tradition must be conveyed via modernity of technique and presented with dignity and impressiveness. Our sages had this in mind when they spoke of "Yayin Yashan B'ekankan Chodosh" — "Old wine in new vessels."

This principle which I have adopted as a lodestar for my rabbinic calling, gained its clearest exponents in the life and writings of the 19th century G-d intoxicated leader of Traditional Judaism, Rabbi Samson Raphael Hirsch, of blessed memory.

"There is nothing in the ancient faith of Israel which requires that it be carried out in the rude, uncouth manner brought about by the conditions of the Ghetto. On the contrary it is worthy of being presented with the accompaniments of beauty, splendor and impressiveness, without departing in the slightest from the rules and ordinances of our religious code."

These words and sentiments have molded and tinged my underlying philosophy in the past and will always represent the core of my approach to the potency and vitality of Traditional Judaism. The principle is of particular pertinency when one envisages the role of the Synagogue, the nature of the Rabbi's work, the character of the Service, and the diversified colourful facets of Synagogue activity.

Needed — A Sense of Discrimination

One is yet apt to find a number of incorrigibles, who persist in maintaining unwarranted psychological prejudices and immature stereotyped thinking as regards the Traditional Synagogue. What is urgently needed on the part of our laity is a proper and fair sense of discrimination. One who is mature in his thinking must nurture a "mind-set" that will help him to differentiate between the healthy and dynamic philosophy of Traditional Judaism and the faults and failings of the "unorthodox orthodoxes" of some Jews.

A Strange Paradox

It may sound quite paradoxical but from the strict viewpoint of Jewish Halacha there is many a Synagogue, which considers itself traditional, which is not meeting the standards of "hilchos beis hakaneses," laws pertaining to the Synagogue and Synagogue Worship. If there is on the part of the Synagogue, a complete disregard or disparagement of the rules of respect, dignity and propriety in the conduct of the Synagogue's Services and activities, then that "traditional" Synagogue is not complying with the standards of "derech erez" as prescribed by Jewish law.

Present shortcomings of a Traditional Synagogue's Service should therefore, not be ascribed to Traditional Judaism per se but rather to the economic, cultural and sociological difficulties confronting our forefathers in the challenges of adjustment and acculturation. There have been far too many Traditional Synagogues lacking in far-sighted vision and above all, unprepared or unwilling to interpret and present to an American and a Canadian born generation the warmth and richness of a glorious tradition, in the appealing and meaningful vehicle of "derech erez" wedded to Torah. There has been in the early years of Jewish settlement, a dearth of Rabbis who were conversant with the mores and challenges of a contemporary society and with the ability of a pulpit voice and a creative pen to reach the hearts and minds of a growing generation steeped in the mire of secularism and materialism.

My Firm Conviction

Your Rabbi has an unshakeable faith in the principle that Traditional Judaism can be conveyed and experienced esthetically, inspiringly and meaningfully, with propriety and decorum, with modernity and soulful impressiveness, with the synthesis of Torah and "derech erez."

RABBI SIMON L. ECKSTEIN

B'NAI B'RITH ASKS HELP FOR IMPORTANT PROJECT

The B'nai B'rith Lodge wishes to remind the community that one of its principal projects is the maintenance of a blood bank at the Civic and General Hospitals. Some sixty pints of blood have been used from this bank during the past year and a half.

This service is not restricted to members of B'nai B'rith and their families but is available to anyone in the Jewish community. For this reason, the Lodge feels that it must have a credit of at least 100 pints to meet any emergency which may arise.

The stock is low at the present time and help is needed to replenish the available supply. Enquiries should be directed to Ben Karp, Blood Bank Chairman at CE 3-4073 or 8-5907.
